More questions Answers.NET A deputy Mike Amesbury enchanted with the bill, which has come to Parliament at the right time of the NORTE.Deputy Mike Amesbury has welcomed the news that his bill of private members to cut the cost of school uniform has become law as "a great day." It is the first draft law that the Labour politician has managed to advance throughExtensive legislative process, with the Covid pandemic that brought unexpected and aggregated complications that assured that it was à € œ a long-filled journey »» Read> Live music weekend confirmed in Northwich Square Education (Guide to Cost of School Uniforms) Bill did so through his final reading in the House of Lords on Wednesday (28 April) before being given Royal Assent the following day, which was the last current parliamentary session. Speaking exclusively with the Guardian, he said, "It means that the government must introduce new legally binding guidelines for schools on the cost of school uniforms in England. "Families across the country have told me how they have struggled to pay the cost of sending their children to school in the right uniform. "The school uniform can be a great social leveller in our classrooms. "But children whose families cannot afford expensive uniforms may face isolation and in some cases even exclusion for not wearing rights clothing. "Thanks to Covid it has been a long and moving journey to get this bill through Parliament. "But with the backing of members across the political spectrum, this common sense law will now be able to help families under pressure from England." How the cause and the bill moved from a parental concern to legislation Congressman Weaver Vale first got involved with the issue after being contacted by many of his own constituents concerned and described the good fortune of being voted first on private members' bills in January. of 2020. The vote gives MPs the opportunity to be one of the top 20 to introduce a private members' bill on a subject of their election during the upcoming session. Those with the highest votes are more likely to have time to debate their bill and, therefore, their bills will have a better chance of becoming law. "The enormity of that did not dawn upon me at that time", he said. "Child poverty is something I'm passionate about So be drawn number one in voting, he offered a real opportunity to make a difference. "There are some schools there out with some great teachers and governors and parents parents Keep brand materials to a minimum. "The bill will strengthen that approach to be included with school uniforms, making it legal rather than voluntary." When you're listening to parents up and down the country, some are having to make school decisions about the cost of the uniform which is just not okay, it's not fair and it's not alone. "Children should be able to go to their local school according to their ability, not their ability to pay." The MP explains how his own education and education played a role, Mr. Amesbury went to a non-uniform with a high school and experienced first-hand the cruel difference in those who could afford the latest fashions and those who couldn't. "There have been some interesting opponents of this bill who have come to the line that this is a slippery slope to abolishing school uniforms", he explained. "It's far from that." I personally went to a high school that didn't have a school uniform and really highlighted the kids who could afford the latest fashions and those who couldn't. "The purpose of the bill is to keep branded items to a minimum and put affordability at the centre." The fact that it is now legal puts it on a legal basis, for example, if parents or caregivers believe that a school uniform policy is unfair, they have the force of law to take that issue now". The scheme to reduce the cost of uniforms across the country was backed and supported by the Children's Society, who felt that it was a that Mr. Amesbury felt grateful." I would like to offer my great thanks to all those involved in the campaign. "From the children's society, the National Union of Education and the head teachers from above and below the country." But very important, the children and families who have raised this issue for years and who have formulated directly what this new guide and law will look like. "Like."
