The rupees in the legend of Zelda games have always been fairly easy to find, but in the legend of Zelda: the breath of the wild, you can actually go a while without finding a single rupee. You will very rarely find yourself on long grass or rocks as if you had previously. There are still some fairly simple ways to get rupees to buy a home or complete other fantastic tasks in the breath of the wild, but your strategy will have to be very different from this time. You need 3,000 rupees to buy your first home, which could be daunting, but Swa   games have created a video that describes exactly how you can get a lot of rupees in a short period of time. Basically, it plans to cook almost everything you can find. As a basic example, if you cook an apple, you will be able to sell it for 10 rupees compared to 2 without being cooked. Real money is in making elixir and cooking your food products to create proper meals. Everything that gives you hearts can be cooked in food and any creature you cook with a monster part will become an elixir. You will be able to sell basic cooked food items for 40-50 rupees more. But the best rupee maker is mixing an enduura carrot with a stamella fungus. These items are not super hard to find and will take 100 rupees for every elixir you sell. So let us know in the comments below what was the best rupee who makes meals. It is worth experimenting and cooking everything you find from food products, to materials, to creatures. There are plenty of elixirs that will help you on your journey and if you don't plan on using them, they are worth selling. Welcome to our Zelda Breath of the Wild Rupes Money Farming Guide. In short, it helps to always have some money on you, and afterwards in the game a terrible lot to get after some of the more elusive items. First, a couple of notes - unlike other Zelda games, you don't need to get portfolio updates to store thousands of Rupees. Also, no matter where you sell them - all road travelers and the village store keeps will give you the same amount of money where you go, so there are many sources of Rupees in the game, but some of the most reliable and noteworthy - concluding with some easy cultivation methods - include: Raiding fields and kill enemies - Throughout the game you meet fields full of enemies. Clear these and you will probably find some Rupees lying around, or as a reward in a chest. Better yet, the product drops you get can be sold on, and even the most common creatures have parts that add surprisingly quickly. Take for example the Lizalfos, which you will find on the approach to Zora's domain, their Horns go for 10 Rupees, their Talons 15 and Tails 28 Rupees. The devious Moblins sell for something similar, while even more common enemies have some precious drops if luck is on your side - a Keeze Eyeball will go for 20 Rupees, while an Octorok Eyeball will trade for 25 Rupees. Enemies and Special Monsters - Some enemies are worth keeping eye for their Rupee sliding properties. One is the X, a bunny rabbit roaming through the woods, like one we found over K Village. Another are assassins who will choose a fight with the link while you are exploring the wider world. ThesePowerful and fast opponents, but if you defeat them, you will receive a few rupees for the trouble.Ancient Materials    Hyrule is full of destroyed and ruined Guardians, and you can search for antique materials. You'll find plenty around Hateno Fort, which is located east of the Peaks Duelist Stable, which you'll cross on the way to Hateno Village. Defeat Guardians and Guardian Scouts also drop ancient materials too.Ancient Vine    12 rupeesAncient Spring    15 rupeesAncient Gear    30 rupeesAncient Tree    40 rupeesAncient Core    80 rupeesAncient Core    200 rupeesRemember the above can be mistaken for Ancient Armour at the Akkala Ancient Tech Lab and Slate will be upgraded at Hateno Ancient Tech Lab.Amiibo    Scan your amiibo    regardless of whether Zelda has a theme or not    and you will receive a variety of drops, from ingredients to crates, to coffers and even real rupees. You can scan any amiibo once a day, and for anything you don't want, you can sell it at a normal income and basically free of charge.There's a chance that rupees drop when you scan a certain amiibo.Mining Ores    When you climb mountains or explore cabins, you'll find glittering black rocks. These can be crushed with a hammer or a heavy weapon (or with a Bomb Rune, although the contents will be everywhere) to reveal a variety of minerals. Incandescent blue minerals also contain glowing stones.As with antique materials, although they can be exchanged for armor upgrades, so it's worth keeping a few, the minerals are common enough to sell even a handful at a huge profit:Flint    5 rupeesAmber    30 rupeesOpal    60 rupeesLuminous stone    70 rupeesTopaz    180 RupeesRubio    210 RupeesSapphire    260 RupeesDiamond    500 RupeesThe sapphire is worth 260 Rupees a piece.Beat a stone Talus    These are mini bosses who, once defeated, release some of the minerals mentioned above. Our page on how to beat Stone Talus explains how to take them down, and remember that they will return after a Blood Moon occurs, allowing you to return and face them again for even more loot. Thanks to a new update, you can now play Zelda Breath of the Wild in VR. Do you want a hand with the main game? We also have a DLC 1 guide and a DLC 2 guide, including all Tingle, Majora's Mask, Phantom, Midna locations. As in every Open-World, there are places for breeding if you want to get thousands of rupees with reliable (but repetitive) methods. There are some who go around, but one of our favorites is an early betting shop in the Lurelin Village, located on the coast south of Di Tower. He bet you 100 rupees with a possible return of 300 rupees, but saving before opening a chest and reloading if you don't get what you want, it means you will always despair. Sometime is YouTube User Beardbear explaining how it works : Another is playing one of the mini-games - Snowball Bowling - in Pondo's Lodge in the far Northwest corner of the map. Take some cold resistance and head east of the Tower of the region to find it, and if you line it up in a specific way, you can get a strike reliably, nettics of the 300 rupees for 20 Rupee Game. YouTube User ChrisGoSpewPew above explains how it works. work.
